

《哈根达斯要推出新的酒精冰淇淋，外媒反响不错》

Winter just began on Dec. 21, but it's not too soon to start dreaming about the return of Rosé all day. That's because you won't have to wait until the official start of summer to partake this year.

????12?21??

Rosé & Cream, the newest addition to the Spirits Collection from Häagen-Dazs, is set hit store shelves in February, according to Instagram account @CandyHunting. It is gluten free and has just just 310 calories in a serving.

??????&????????“????”(Spirits Collection)????????Instagram??@CandyHunting????????2????????????????????310????

????????

Rosé & Cream will join the six pints made with bourbon, Irish cream, rum, and stout which are already a part of the Spirit Collection. The flavors include: Bourbon Praline Pecan, Bourbon Vanilla Bean Truffle, Irish Cream Brownie, Irish Cream cookie Squares, Rum Tres Leches, and Stout Chocolate Pretzel Crunch. There is also the Amaretto Black Cherry Almond Toffee pint for those hunting a non-dairy option.

??????&??
 ??

Like its peers, the reported new Rosé & Cream flavor will contain less than 0.5% alcohol by volume, meaning you won't get drunk on this ice cream alone. If you crack open a bottle of Rosé at home to drink as you eat, that could be a different story. Or how about a Rosé & Cream milkshake spiked with extra Rosé? Who wants in?

????????????????????????????????&?????????0.5%??
 ?????????????????????&????????????????

The Spirits Collection was first introduced in the U.S. this past February, a year and a half after a boozy ice cream line from Häagen-Dazs went on sale in Canada. Here's to hoping the addition of even more new flavors will mark the collection's first birthday!

??????2019?2??