@bts.bighitofficial is TIME's 2020 Entertainer of the Year. Between releasing multiple albums and breaking every type of record in 2020, the Korean pop band ascended to the zenith of pop stardom. "We climbed our way up slowly, so it feels like we grew together. And we know each other on a deeper level," Jung Kook tells TIME. In an era marked by so much anguish and cynicism, BTS has stayed true to their message of kindness, connection and self-acceptance, writes @raisabruner. That's the foundation of their relationship with their fans, the ARMY. Read more at the link in bio and tune in for a special performance from BTS tonight at 10/9c on NBC. LeBron James (@kingjames) is TIME's 2020 Athlete of the Year. After nearly two decades in the NBA, James has fully embraced that his talent on the court is a means to achieving something greater off it, writes @sgregory31. And this year, more than in any before it, he showed why he is unrivaled in both. Read more at the link in bio. Find out who will be the 2020 TIME Person of the Year tonight at 10/9c on NBC.
